Learning Module Description

The South Carolina Teaching Standards (SCTS) 4.0 self-paced learning module is an e-learning experience that offers an in-depth look at indicators that create and promote an environment where teachers establish clear rules and expectations for learning and behavior. You will explore strategies to manage disruptive student behavior. You will discover how timely management of student behavior is critical so that productive instruction can take place in your classroom. You will take into consideration and ask yourself if your instructional style facilitates or inhibits proper student behavior. Finally, you will use guiding questions to create a PowerPoint that details and explains how you plan to manage student behavior. This module is not designed to enhance or replicate evaluator training, but rather to refine and extend an educator’s growth and development.

Facilitators

All course facilitators are experienced online instructors.
Goals
Upon completion of this course, users will be able to:

- Plan and implement clear rules and expectations for learning and behavior.
- Explain how to use a variety of techniques to cultivate appropriate student conduct.
- Demonstrate strategies for dealing with individual student disruptions quickly and firmly to minimize loss of instructional time while keeping other students on task.

Major Assessment Artifact
In this Major Assessment Artifact for this learning module, you will be creating a PowerPoint that explains how you manage student behavior and reflecting upon your practices.
